

What Our Flag Means

The flag means a lot to our country and to the people in it. All of our achievements are shown along with the flag. It shows that everyone is treated equally. Our flag shows that Americans never give up.

The United States and all of its achievements are displayed by our flag. We started when we broke away from Great Britain and created a new country. When we split up during the Civil War we came back together afterwards in peace and harmony. The stars on our flag represent the fifty states we have united into a country. America has done a lot to get to where we are today.

In our country, we are all treated the same. The U.S. has worked hard to make sure that men and women are treated with equal with respect. No matter what race or color, our flag stands for everyone in our country. The white on the flag represents that the U.S. treats people equally no matter their looks, intelligence, or capability. The flag accepts people of all types.

Americans in our country never give up. After the tragedy of 9/11 we stood up to the terrorists and said that we aren't afraid. When jobs and everything was rough, we pushed through the Great Depression and survived. After the Japanese bombed Pearl Harbor we fought them in World War II until it ended. The blue on the flag represents the tears we cried, the red stands for the blood spent, but all of this keeps our flag still waving.

The United States of America proudly wields our flag as a symbol of everything it has to offer. Everything we earned is symbolized by the flag. U.S. citizens look at the flag and they think how every person is treated equal. America will keep on fighting for what is right for the rest of our days. Our flag is what makes us Americans, people who are free.
